NEW DUTY ON FARM IMPLEMENTS STARTS ARGUMENT IN HOUSE

Prime Minister Replies to Criticism Charging King With Seeking to Capitalize on Unrest of Agrarians—Is Prepared to Stake Political Future on His Proposals

Gov't Will Have No Power to Alter Rates on Farm Products

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—The House of Commons had only passed about one-third of the new tariff proposals when it rose at midnight. The final hour of the sitting was the most lively of the day with the chamber resounding with applause and cross-firing as Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Premier R. B. Bennett got into action.

The increase in the tariff on farm implements started the trouble. When they were called, Dr. T. F. Donnelly (Liberal, Willow Bunch) led a vigorous attack. The farmers of Western Canada, he declared, would not be satisfied with mere assurance that there would be no increase in prices. Even if there was no increase that would not be sufficient. The cost of farm machinery must come down. With the price of wheat where it was today farmers could not pay the present prices.

KING IS CRITICAL
When the real effect of this increase in the tariff on farm implements became known to the Western farmers they would be coming to Ottawa by the hundreds to demand a revision, said Mr. King. The increase would cause unrest among the agrarian population. In the long run it would not benefit even the manufacturers.

The Prime Minister charged that the Opposition speakers were advocating the purchase of foreign-made machinery rather than Canadian. After nine years of Liberal rule there was unrest among the farmers of the West and now the Liberal leader was seeking to capitalize this unrest and place the blame for it on a Government which had only been in power six weeks.

FARMERS IN ACCORD
The farming population, Mr. Bennett went on, were not of the same views as those who had just spoken. The farmers of Canada would rather buy Canadian-made goods if they got them as cheaply. They had told him to go ahead and secure the markets for Canadian manufacturers provided it did not mean higher costs to the consumers.

The Government was determined to carry out its proposals to relieve the present conditions in the country. It believed the proposals now before the House would alleviate these conditions. He was prepared to stake his political future on these proposals improving Canadian conditions.

So far there has been no serious threat in any of the tariff items. FARM PRODUCTS EXCLUDED
An amendment, submitted by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, excluding farm products from the provisions of the resolution which gave the Government power to remove or reduce duties when producers were taking advantage of the market in raising prices, was passed.

A reduction was made in the rates on hops. The new rates are 8 cents per pound, British preference; 12 cents intermediate, and 14 cents general. In the changes announced Tuesday the rates had been fixed at 12 cents, 20 cents, and 25 cents, respectively.

GERMAN PARTY LEADERS CAUSE MUCH DISTRUST

Head of Victorious Party at Election Declares Against Compromise

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—Rumors today that the Fascist party, strongest in the Reichstag since its extraordinary gains in Sunday's elections, was conspiring to seize power in the state, have rendered pressing the problem of the party's future role in German politics.

The rumors were officially declared to be without foundation by the Ministry of the Interior and by the Prussian Government, which accused the Communists of attempting to launch a Fascist "Putsch" scare.

But the recent utterances of Fascist spokesmen hardly have been calculated to soothe such public nervousness as exists.

Prussian police say they have found no evidence supporting reports in one section of the German press that the Fascists were holding secret military drills and buying weapons on a large scale.

GREAT PARK PLANNED ON WEST COAST

Premier Tolmie Takes Steps to Have New Reserve Created

WOULD ATTRACT MUCH TOURIST ATTENTION

Second Area Near Vancouver Is Ideal in All Respects Also

(By Staff Correspondent)
REVELSTOCK, Sept. 20.—Creation of two national parks on the British Columbia coast, one on the west coast of Vancouver Island and the other adjacent to Vancouver, would mean the expenditure of immense sums by the Dominion parks branch, and afford unique attractions for tourists, declared Hon. S. F. Tolmie, in discussing the proposal for the establishment of such areas.

The Federal Government is very anxious to obtain two park areas on the coast, for of all the many park areas in the Dominion, the localities mentioned would be the only national parks that would be accessible all the year round. This is a further reason why the idea finds so much favor at Ottawa.

WILL STUDY AREAS
Immediate investigation of the districts will be made by experts of the Dominion parks branch, and also by provincial engineers. Following the reports of these officials, Premier Tolmie said, discussion would be held with the Dominion Government regarding the transfer itself. Until such time neither Government was committed to any definite undertaking.

General details were discussed, however, and these require that the province entitle such an incumbrance, such as timber claims in any area to be created, a national park. This, it is expected, could easily be arranged by exchange for other holdings of similar value. The Dominion would then undertake the construction of roads, the improvement of the area and the expenditure of such sums as would make its attractions available to the public.

ARE CLOSE TO CITIES
In relation to the Alouette Lake area it is stressed by Don Munday, who prepared an extensive report on its unique beauties and scenic values, that in this region is the largest and oldest stand of timber in British Columbia. The forest giants are from 800 to 700 years senior to the big trees near Cameron Lake, that there are dozens of small and exceedingly beautiful lakes, that the Golden Ears, the twin peaks, tower 4,000 feet above the forest lands. Roads reach to the fringe of the area now.

Unlike the other national parks of British Columbia, which are located at great distances from the centers of provincial population, both the Alouette Lake and the area of Vancouver Island's west coast would be within the reach of everyone.

The West Coast park, if taken over by the Dominion and nationalized, would be reached by road from Alberni and from an extension from the present highway at Jervis Bay, thus forming a great loop from Victoria to Nanaimo, via the Malahat, and from Nanaimo and Port Alberni through the park down the West Coast to Victoria.

Bridge Designer Dead

WINDSOR, Sept. 20.—George Frederick Porter, designer of Quebec Bridge, for some years chief engineer of the Canadian Bridge Company, at Walkerville, and one of the outstanding engineers of the continent, died suddenly in a Detroit hospital from an attack of angina pectoris. He had entered the hospital for a rest period.

First Unit of New Coast Air Fleet Gets Official Welcome on Arrival Here

Flying a mammoth eight-passenger Fleetster, the first unit of a fleet of planes to be operated on a triangular air line between Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle, Edward A. Lowe, Jr., president of the Pacific International Airways, Limited, arrived at Lansdowne Field at 3:42 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Vancouver. With him were Mrs. Lowe, Alexander Holden, a director of the company, and W. J. Barrows, pilot.

A crowd of nearly 1,500 people were on hand at the field to greet the newcomers, and an official welcome was extended to Mr. Lowe and his associates by Mayor Herbert Anson, Alderman W. T. Strath, chairman of the industrial committee of the City Council, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau and other public bodies.

W. J. Barrows, pilot of the Fleetster and an official of the Pacific International Airways, stated he could not give any definite date for the opening of the new triangular service. "I might say that the machines for this service have been ordered and some have already been delivered, but there still are some matters to be adjusted before we can name the official date of commencement," he said.

Mr. Barrows further stated that reports had been circulated to the effect that the company would employ American pilots and mechanics in connection with the service. "That is entirely wrong. As far as it is possible, we will employ Canadian pilots, and would like to have this fact made known so that pilots on this side of the line may make their applications. It is the intention of Mr. Lowe and myself to make our homes in Victoria."

Mr. Barrows stated that a smaller type of plane would be used in the service at the start and larger machines placed in operation in the Spring. The Fleetster which arrived yesterday is a special job, he said, and would be used for charter purposes, later to be placed in the regular service.

Highlights of Day in House of Commons

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The post of Minister of Finance would not be filled by someone other than himself until after his return from the Imperial Conference, Premier R. B. Bennett stated in the House of Commons this morning.

ENVOYS ABROAD

Premier R. B. Bennett announced today that he looked upon the Canadian ministers at Washington, Paris and Tokyo as permanent officials, but the Canadian High Commissioner in London should represent the view of the administration in office in Canada. No appointment to the Canadian high commission would be made, the Prime Minister stated, until he had surveyed the situation in London.

TARIFF REVISIONS

Public hearings will be held between now and the next session of Parliament at which protests against the new tariff changes may be submitted, Premier R. B. Bennett announced tonight. The Government has not yet decided just what form the hearings will take.

GASOLINE PRICES

The four leading oil refineries had assured him they would not increase prices to the consumer, Premier Bennett told the House today when the question of gasoline prices came up.

DISARMAMENT IS HALTED BY TWO NATIONS

World-Wide Desire for Agreement is Expressed by Delegates to League

PROGRESS IS BLOCKED BY FRANCE AND ITALY

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—The League of Nations Assembly closed its second week today on a note of new optimism, for early disarmament, long urged by Premier James H. Scullin of Australia.

This British Dominion chief joined his voice with those of Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, and the spokesmen of other powers, great and small, who called for more speed in arriving at an effective general agreement.

The meeting of the Assembly now has heard with accumulating emphasis denunciations of existing armaments and rivalry from the delegates in every part of the earth.

THE STUMBLING BLOCK
With these urgent calls for armament reduction ringing in their ears, the delegations of France and Italy, whose controversy is seen as the chief obstacle to disarmament progress, admitted that their efforts to get together on a satisfactory basis have thus far proved unsuccessful.

In authoritative quarters, it was felt prospects for a successful meeting of the preparatory disarmament commission on November 3, both the Alouette Lake and the area of Vancouver Island's west coast would be within the reach of everyone.

WORLD COURT STATUTE

The Assembly Judicial Committee measures today to meet the situation created by failure of the protocol for revision of the World Court Statute to come into force.

Cuba's objection to its immediate effectiveness remains the chief obstacle. More than twenty other states have not yet ratified. All except Cuba, however, have signified they will not oppose its coming into force without the full ratification of all the states, as did Cuba.

CRISIS COMING STATES LEADER

Lloyd George Addresses British Liberals on Economic Emergency

SUFFOLK, England, Sept. 20.—David Lloyd George, speaking at a big Liberal rally today, said the time had arrived for a bold, fresh re-examination of the whole British industrial and economic position.

"There has been nothing comparable to the present position since the darkest hours of the war," he said. "Unemployment is growing, not by battalions but by divisions, week by week, and I cannot see the end of it. We are not passing through, but passing into a crisis."

Great Britain not only is confronted with a great situation at home but in India, Africa, and throughout the Empire, said the Liberal leader.

In characteristic style Mr. Lloyd George poked fun at the tariff campaign being waged in Britain now. "A drowning man should not clutch at straws," he said. "Many capitalists would make larger profits out of the new system of tariffs, but we have got to think of the 45,000,000 people who have got to live."

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED AT OTTAWA FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA BY HON. S. F. TOLMIE

Has Federal Co-operation

HON. Dr. S. F. Tolmie, Premier of British Columbia, is now en route to Victoria after gaining the sympathetic and co-operative understanding of the Federal Cabinet in matters pertaining to the future and prosperity of the province.

PLANS DARING FLIGHT TO AID SICK SKIPPER

Nome Aviator Will Carry Stricken Captain Over Siberian Ice Fields

SHIP SURROUNDED BY ICE 250 MILES AWAY

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 20.—Another rescue flight over wastes of the Siberian Arctic will be made from here as soon as weather permits by Frank Dobson, one of the heroes of last Winter's search for the American aviators, Ben Eielson and Earl Gordin, Capt. A. P. Jochimsen is critically ill aboard his motorship Karise, surrounded by ice 250 miles northwest of here, and messages from the vessel say its speedy delivery to the hospital here is necessary to save his life.

The Svenson Company has a tender in open water, but surrounded by ice, off Cape Serge, the place which was a gasoline cache for the American, Russian and Canadian aviators who carried on the months' search for Eielson and Gordin that finally ended in recovery of their bodies.

Dobson, flying the only plane in the North equipped with pontoons, must find an open lead near the vessel in order to land.

The Karise has aboard a cargo of furs valued at $800,000.

SPENCER SHOT SMITH SAYS CORONER'S JURY

No New Developments in Search for Killer, but Police Confident That He Will Be Found

WILLIAMS LAKE, Sept. 20.—The coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Edward Smith, who died at Deer Creek Ranch, Chilcotin, on September 10, convened at Williams Lake Courthouse today, and after an hour's session brought in a verdict that Edward Smith died of a gunshot wound in the back, which he received from a gun fired by Cosens Spencer, with intent to kill.

There are no new developments in the search for Spencer, but the police are confident that he will be located.

Mr. C. Spencer has raised the amount of reward to anyone finding his husband, dead or alive, to $1,000.

POLICE CHIEF ADVISES PAYMENT OF WAGES BY CHEQUE IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER, Sept. 20.—Chief W. J. Bingham and Inspector J. J. Thomson are suggesting to all business concerns that employees be paid by cheque instead of in cash.

This advice follows two contemplated robberies of firms which paid in cash during the past week. In each case it is believed that robbers were frustrated by the police receiving information in advance and surrounding the business premises with armed officers.

Premier Returning Home After Effective Consultation With Hon. R. B. Bennett—Presented Memorandum of Ways and Means for Providing Employment on Constructive Works

Peace River Outlet Problem to Be Given Very Active Attention Soon

Province to Have Five-Year Census—Overlapping Fields of Taxation to Receive Adjustment at Conference Next Year—Foreuses Renewed Development of Antipodean Trade

By Staff Correspondent
REVELSTOCK, Sept. 20.—Premier S. F. Tolmie and Hon. N. S. Lough returned to British Columbia after a visit to Ottawa with assurances and accomplishments that mean a great deal to the people of the province. Among the many matters which were taken up at Ottawa, Premier Tolmie is able to announce that the Dominion Government is anxious and willing to take over two sea-level areas and develop them extensively as national parks. An inspection will be made immediately by Federal park officials of sections on the west coast of Vancouver Island and in the vicinity of Alouette Lake, contiguous to Vancouver. Satisfactory progress was made in discussing with Ottawa the question of a Peace River outlet. This matter will engage the attention of Premier R. B. Bennett upon his return from the Imperial Conference. By that time, it is expected, the railroad survey reports of the season's work will be available.

FIVE LOCAL PLAYERS WIN REP PLACES

British Columbia's needs in the question of unemployment were thoroughly discussed with Hon. Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor. Announcements in connection with this subject will be forthcoming from Ottawa immediately.

GETS FIVE-YEAR CENSUS

In the matter of taking the census, which has in the past discriminated against British Columbia in comparison with the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, this province will, in future, obtain the same treatment as other Western Provinces, which now have a five-year census.

Adjustment on the taxation fields, which now overlap, between the Dominion and the provinces was urged upon the Federal Government, with the result that a conference of provincial Premiers and Finance Ministers with Hon. R. B. Bennett and his Ministry will take place early next year.

DISCUSSED PEACE OUTLET

In commenting upon his trip, when interviewed on the train, Premier Tolmie said that outlet for the Peace River was discussed with heads of the railways and with Premier Bennett.

PICTURESQUE OLD-TIMER IN CARIBOO DEAD

Chinese Woman Had Lived Constantly Near Quesnel Since 1865

INTENDED TO VISIT HOMETOWN SHORTLY

QUESNEL, Sept. 20.—"Blind Mary," eighty-four, a Chinese woman who for sixty-four years lived in the old mining town of Van Winkle and Stanley without a single visit outside, dropped dead near her cabin on Lightning Creek. She was preparing to depart for China within a few days.

For a month Chinese here and at Barkerville have been collecting a fund, which was to have been used in paying Mary's fare back to China. Mary, or "Potatoes," as she was familiarly known to the early miners, became famous locally two decades ago when she regained her eyesight after many years of blindness.

To restore her sight Mary used a concoction consisting chiefly of Chinese camphor. Though blind she continued her duties about the house and in addition kept the woodshed well filled with fuel, gathered on the hill back of her cabin and on the bank of Lightning Creek, where gnarled willows have grown over the old workings of the Vulcan and Costello claims.

Her partner, "Big Mouth" Jack, eighty-five, an itinerant prospector for sixty-five years, never made a rich strike. Like Mary, Jack has never been outside since his arrival in 1860. He has been as far as Quesnel once or twice during the past fifty years.

The fund collected for Mary is now being turned over to Jack, who will sail for China on the Empress of Canada early in October.

Blakeburn Relief Fund Is Growing

A magnificent response has been made in Victoria to the appeal for helping the widows and children of the miners killed recently in the terrible disaster at the Blakeburn mine, near Coalton, B.C.

The total sum already received by The Colonist is $2,572.96. Of this amount $2,620.48 was previously acknowledged. Included in Saturday's receipts was a donation of $25 from Robert Burns McKicking.

Cariboo-Alaska Highway Plan Captures Interest Of U.S. Party on Tour

Magnificent Scenery and Wealth of B.C. Resources
Amazes Visitors

Nearly half of the September issue of Touring Topics, the official organ of the Automobile Club of Southern California, is devoted to an illustrated account of the first Cariboo-Alaska Highway Caravan, in a twelve-page article from the pen of Douglas C. Mitchell.

The article reproduces a large map of the route followed from Vancouver north to Hazelton, and a table of distances involved, as well as eighteen excellent photographs of the scenes encountered on the way, and of the personnel of the caravan, which included distinguished leaders from both sides of the border.

VIEWS OF LEADERS

The camera has caught Hon. R. Randolph Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, Miss Margaret Mackenzie, Premier S. P. Tolmie, Hon. W. A. McKenzie, and other British Columbia members of the party in characteristically happy moods. The United States is represented by Ernest W. Sawyer, executive assistant to the Secretary for the Interior; George A. Parks, Governor of Alaska, and many others.

Credit is given in the article for the comfort of those who undertook the trip, to two officials of the Bureau of Provincial Information, who were vested with the big task of arranging the itinerary of the caravan, and making all plans for the entertainment, shelter and transportation of the distinguished party.

KEY TO UNDERSTANDING

Of the Cariboo-Alaska Highway route itself, Mr. Mitchell has this to say, in part:

"Dr. Tolmie's caravan furnished those of us from the United States with a facility, which in no other manner could have been ours, to learn of and to comprehend the magnitude, the impelling scenic charms, the natural resources, and the potentialities of the Province of British Columbia, and to mark and appreciate in the fullest sense the magnanimity of its people."

A magnificent description of the actual journey of the caravan is given in an article, written with fine understanding by Mr. Mitchell.

DESCRIPTION OF TOUR

Approximately half of the issue in question is devoted to pictures and the description of the tour, and this in an organ that circulates freely among the 134,000 members of the Automobile Club of Southern California, and its many associated organizations.

Evident from the comment made in the article in question, is the fact that the Cariboo-Alaska Caravan not only fired the admiration of the United States guests on the tour, but left lasting and deep impressions in their minds as to the grandeur of British Columbia scenery, and the immense storehouse of natural wealth which Olympian gods laid aside for its inhabitants at the dawn of history.

REPRESENTATIVES OF CHURCH TO CONVENE

Fifty Ministerial Members Will Gather Here Tuesday for Victoria Presbytery Meetings

Representatives of forty pastoral charges of the United Church of Canada on Vancouver Island and fifty ministerial members, including those on the retired list, will meet Tuesday morning in the Metropolitan Church for the Fall meeting of the Presbytery of Victoria under the presidency of the retiring chairman, Rev. James Hood. The sessions are expected to last two days, during which the reports of various committees will be made and election of officers for the coming year take place.

Besides the home mission work among the white congregations there are within the bounds of the presbytery six Indian missions, Chinese congregations in Victoria and Nanaimo and a Japanese charge in Victoria with auxiliary preaching stations up-Island and a mission to the East Indians under the care of Rev. W. L. McFate, of Vancouver. The marine mission on the West Coast is carried on by Rev. James Dewar, of Bamfield, by means of the motorboat Melvin Swartout that was dedicated recently in this harbor.

Rev. S. T. Galbraith will present the home mission survey, assisted by Dr. George A. Wilson, of Vancouver, the home missionary superintendent, and Dr. S. S. Osterhout, superintendent of Oriental missions. Rev. M. W. Lees and Rev. E. R. McLean, of Vancouver, will deal with religious education and Rev. J. C. Switzer with evangelism and social service. Dr. C. T. Scott, of Metropolitan Church, will take devotional periods at 11:30 o'clock each day.

New members will be received and suitable recognition will be made of those who have died during the past six months, among whom is the late Dr. J. Campbell, of this city.

COAL HEAT! DEPENDABLE ADAPTABLE ECONOMICAL

MORE
B.T.U.'s

HEAT is the first essential of home comfort in winter time. That's why there is greater economy in the use of Island Coal. It's easy to specify Island Coal when you order... just say "Nanaimo-Wellington" or "Comox" in the size you want.

Both these grades come from the richest seams of the Vancouver Island field, carefully mined and carefully prepared. Both are long-burning coals... quick and responsive... plenty of heat when you want it... or a slumbering fire for milder weather.

Nanaimo-Wellington and Comox coals are noted for their greater heat content. More heat per dollar means substantial savings in your fuel bills.

These coals are adaptable to every domestic and industrial requirement. When automatically fired and governed by thermostatic control, yield more heat at less cost... with lower consumption. You can always be sure of quick, abundant, even heat in your hot water system, warm air furnace, stove or steam plant... when you use either the Nanaimo-Wellington or the Comox Coal.

Let the Collieries Combustion Engineer tell you how to get the most heat out of your furnace... for the smallest amount of coal.

Patronize the dealers who sell Island Coal. See the list attached. Help these merchants meet the competition of imported coals... and fuels other than coal. They are all employers of B.C. labor. Through them is distributed the output of one of British Columbia's major industries.

By buying Island Coal you are helping business conditions in B.C. and at the same time bettering the economical operation of your own household.

Two Cabinet Ministers Present at Stevedore Ceremony—Japanese
Praised for Activities

STEVESTON, Sept. 20.—Complimenting the residents of Richmond, and particularly the Japanese, on the opening their fourteen-room Lord Byng School, Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, Friday night warmly commended the community spirit which had actuated the school board, the Provincial Government, the municipal council and the Steveston Japanese to co-operate in providing an institution for the children of the community, which embodies the best of modern facilities for education.

It is exceedingly gratifying, Mr. Hinchliffe asserted, to know that the Japanese community, realizing their duty in the matter of education, and the fact that many of them are not taxpayers, voluntarily contributed $20,000 toward the cost of the edifice, in addition to paying in previous years a portion of the cost of educating Japanese children. On the platform was also Hon. S. L. Howe, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Fisheries. The new school stands on a site of four acres and was built at a cost of $7,000.

CHINESE ARRAIGNED ON NARCOTIC COUNT

Case of Leong Soo, Charged With Selling Opium, Is Remanded
Until Wednesday

Leong Soo, Chinese, was arraigned yesterday in the city police court, before Magistrate George Jay, on a charge of selling opium. Frank Higgins, K.C., counsel for the accused, requested a remand of the case, which was granted until Wednesday next. Election was reserved.

Application for bail for Leong Soo was made by Mr. Higgins, who told the court that the accused was well-known here, having resided in Victoria for many years. Bail was fixed at $2,000 in two sureties.

Ming Yew and Lin, Chinese, were each fined $50, or two months' jail in default of payment, on a charge of being found in an opium den. Chief of Police Fry told the court that, in company with members of the narcotics branch of the R.C.M.P., he had visited premises situated at 634 Herald Street, and found the two accused in a room in which there was opium smoking paraphernalia.

RECORD OF STATESMANSHIP

Judging from his political actions, although so short a time in office, there is reason to hope that Mr. R. B. Bennett, with the splendid ability he possesses, will prove an admirable leader to and propagator of the heritages of the Dominion. All great Prime Ministers of the Dominion, all contributed to the task in some way or other, but there are certain names that single themselves out as those who became associated, through their personalities and statesmanlike qualities, with events that are landmarks in the history of the Dominion.

It is a reminder of how the roll of our annals is lengthening to recall that Sir John A. Macdonald was born in the year of Waterloo. When actual accomplishments are measured he stands out as the greatest of the leaders who have assisted in bringing Canada to her present state of development. He was among the first to suggest Confederation. He was the most powerful of political instruments in putting it into effect. It was fitting, therefore, that the task of forming the first Dominion Cabinet should have been conferred to him by Lord Monck and that he should have been created a K.C.B. on the first Dominion Day.

Sir John envisioned the National Policy as early as 1872. He saw in it a necessary economic complement of Confederation. It was not until the election of 1878 that he swept the country on the issue. In that election he promised a protective policy, and he gave it with a full hand the following year. It is the policy upon which Canada's prosperity has been based ever since. The new Prime Minister, Mr. Bennett, is thoroughly persuaded of this and is accordingly in the legislative arena before the present emergency session at Ottawa.

Sir John laid the coping stone on the structure of Confederation in bringing to fruition the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. His part in this work is a chapter of outstanding importance in the political annals of the country. Not only was he largely instrumental in getting the contract for the building of this transcontinental signed fifty years ago, but he had the satisfaction of seeing his labors crowned with success and of himself making a trip across Canada by the C.P.R. from Ottawa to Port Moody in July, 1886.

The record of Sir John A. Macdonald is one of boundless courage, patience, perseverance and knowledge of human nature. He was possessed of strategic ability, delicate finesse and subtle power over men. All these qualities stood him in excellent stead in negotiating Confederation, in persuading his colleagues of the need of the National Policy and, finally, in bringing about the construction of the C.P.R. His life, both as a man and a statesman, must always remain an inspiration to his political successors, and, as well, to the youth of this Dominion. It was that of one who has left a heritage of action which has enrolled his name high among the list of Empire builders.

Another Prime Minister who occupied a leading place in political history was Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He, too, has left behind him a record of service which his successors, no matter of what political stripe, can well emulate. He was a leader of rarely balanced judgment, possessing a firm grasp of essential principles. He had trained himself admirably for a political career. It was the wealth of wisdom he had amassed, coupled with his rare tact, his adeptness in leadership and his magnetic personality which were largely instrumental in keeping him in power for fifteen years.

Sir Wilfrid possessed the faculty of surrounding himself with able administrators. The guiding principles of his political career were individual liberty, collective prosperity, racial and religious harmony and the growth of the country to nationhood. He achieved a good deal for Canada. He left an example of the highest personal integrity and added new chapters to the heritage of statesmanship which has been such an inspiration in our political life.

The third of the great Prime Ministers of the Dominion, since Confederation, was Sir Robert Borden, who held the reins of office in evenly balanced hands during the stressful years of the Great War. He had earned the reputation before many years in public life of being the ablest Parliamentarian of them all. He won his spurs by sheer force of merit and added to his prestige by qualities which appealed strongly to the admiration and confidence of his fellow countrymen and those of all other countries. He was known in political life as a "clean, honest, earnest statesman" with a power of lucid expression which makes him a convincing speaker whatever his subject.

One of the type of Sir Robert Borden was an immense asset to Canada in the years of 1914-1918. He had the patriotic outlook in wide measure. He directed the country's course in a manner which won the admiration of the entire Empire. In crises he was possessed of admirable self control. His statesmanship always was of the broadest character. Where controversies arose he always preferred reason to denunciation and constriction to combat. His reputation is solidly entrenched in the memory of a country grateful to him for his services in its political life, and particularly for the practical common sense and the period of action which he incited into this country's conduct of its part in the Great War.

Mr. R. B. Bennett has entered upon his task of government with the foregoing examples of statesmanship as his guide. From each he can learn much that is worth while. He is showing his faith in the record of Sir John A. Macdonald, by realizing the value of keeping political promises. That was one of the greatest of many political assets which Sir John possessed. It bid:

fair to prove of equal value to the present Prime Minister, for already, whatever promises he made during the late election campaign, he has kept. Mr. Bennett thus, by regarding his promises as sacred, has proved he is endowed with one of the attributes of statesmanship. He has inherited the steadfast belief which Sir John A. Macdonald showed in the National Policy which first gave the greatest impetus to Canadian prosperity. One of his first actions in power has been to strengthen the measure of protection which is enjoyed by our industrial life. In doing this Mr. Bennett shows that, like his great predecessors in office, he is the statesman of the constructive type. For him the record of those predecessors in the task of government is one to be emulated. He brings to bear on that task a shrewd business acumen, a close personal knowledge of conditions throughout the Dominion, a keen analytical mind and a well balanced judgment of men and events. He is, in every sense, a worthy successor of the three statesmen mentioned. His grasp of the economic situation at this stage in our development, and the manner in which he is translating it into such substantial action, constitute a guarantee that Canada has made no mistake in putting the Conservatives in power under such leadership.

A NEW CATHEDRAL

The site for the new Roman Catholic Cathedral at Liverpool has been secured and the event has been celebrated by a gathering of 250,000 persons in Thlingwall Park in an open-air service of thanksgiving. The new church edifice planned is on a scale which will make it a landmark for centuries to come. It has been conceived, very naturally, for the further glorification of the Roman Catholic Church, but the conception is inspired as well by other reasons, some of which were explained at the thanksgiving service by Dr. Downey, the Archbishop of Liverpool.

A cathedral, he says, is at least a counter-blast to the materialism of industrialism. It arrests the attention of the thoughtless living. It reminds them that man does not live by bread alone. It recalls to them the things of the spirit; the eternal values. It sets before them the pledge of their immortality. Dr. Downey says: "Apart from the spiritual order to which it properly belongs, our cathedral will be ever a social asset in that it will be a supreme expression of artistic genius, a challenge to the mediocrity of the age, a cultural standard of comparison, a masterpiece to uplift the minds and hearts of those who look upon even its exterior beauty."

The new Liverpool Cathedral is designed to be to the North of England what York Minster used to be. Dr. Downey believes it will make the seaport a great ecclesiastical centre, like Rheims or Cologne, "where men of all nations may meet under one roof in common worship."

A CENTURY HENCE

One strong argument in favor of the prolongation of human life is that those now living may enter into the realm of idleness which Lord Birkenhead forecasts in a hundred years to come. Then, he says, molecular energy will have displaced coal and other fuels as sources of heat and power and the world will be operated by an inexhaustible supply of almost costless force. This means giant machines will displace human energy. There will be synthetic food. Agricultural labor will be needless. Man may have to labor but one of two days a week. The rest of his time will be for leisure.

The trouble will be to devise ways of spending leisure more profitably than those which prevail today. The saving grace of all in Lord Birkenhead's prophecy is that politics and politicians will have disappeared for ever. Experts will govern and their findings will be subject to referendum every twenty-four hours. That suggests that the new leisure of mankind will be spent in passing upon the judgment of their expert rulers.

The I Zingari Cricket Club inculcates three principles in its members: "To keep your wicket; to keep your temper, and to keep your wicket up." They are principles that could be adopted with advantage by every politician.

FOAM FROM A PROW

I have seen how waters, in a deep night hidden, As over it a prow sped black like night, Broke into a foam that, by the dim ship hidden, Glimmered like a comet's wake, mysteriously bright.

And does not something shroud itself, and shiplike riding Invisible through dark of ages, wake and court Matter into spray of life? What force hiding Trails a bristling foam of births to what far port?

—Shakespeare.

The modern youth, when he discovers symptoms of eccentricity in the mental dome of his contemporaries, makes a significant gesture and whispers "bugs." In the old days this disorder was differently described. Sometimes it was attributed to "a bee in his bonnet." At other times the victim was said to be "queer." Bees have been buzzing very industriously in the bonnets of many of our newspaper contemporaries of the Liberal persuasion since the late election. The busy bees are not reconciled to their defeat yet.

Although the new Government has met Parliament and has been emphatically endorsed by the members in that Parliament, the Liberal newspapers have not been convinced that the Conservative victory was not merely an accident. They declare that if the electoral system had been a logical conception, the results might have been different. The Manitoba Free Press and The Toronto Globe in particular have been afflicted with severe attacks of "bugs." The insects of course have attacked the two irreconcilable journals in different ways. Both those newspapers were somewhat wobbly in their adherence to what they called Liberal principles a few months previous to the election. Their minds were filled with misgivings about the capacity for the Liberal leadership of Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King.

The great and unco guid Globe had a "bug" on the subject of Prohibition. Mr. King was not particularly enthusiastic on the subject of Prohibition. Mr. King never was particularly enthusiastic upon any subject, unless the subject happened to be closely related to the question of votes, for votes meant office and power. Ultimately Mr. King succeeded in convincing Mr. Globe that there was a direct connection between Prohibition and power. Mr. King, under the dictation of The Globe, and, it is alleged, of some other newspapers, after mature consideration, decided that it was the whole duty of Canada to help the United States to enforce Prohibition.

As a direct and immediate result of that decision The Globe became an enthusiastic and none too scrupulous supporter of the Government of the Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King. The Globe had practically undertaken to deliver the Prohibition vote of Ontario to Mr. King, and the Prohibition vote of Ontario was believed to be about the most influential factor in a Dominion general election. Mr. King would not have hovered long between two opinions on the subject of Prohibition but for the fact that the attitude of the United States had not been particularly friendly to Canada, and there were many Liberals who doubted the expediency of Canada helping the United States to do something the people of the United States did not seem particularly anxious to do themselves and facing both legitimate business and revenue into the bargain. The co-operation of the Liberal leader and the Liberal newspaper (which claims to be an independent newspaper) did not carry the Province of Ontario for the Liberal Government. But the independent newspaper is more enthusiastic than ever for the Liberal cause, and is only second to The Manitoba Free Press and The Holy Toronto Star in predicting dire results to Canada as a result of the defeat of the Liberal Government. There are no indications of disaster to Canada yet. There are marked indications of the development of a more hopeful spirit and a healthier state of business in Canada, but the prophets of woeful countenance will continue to predict the worst and pray for the fulfillment of their predictions.

The bug of The Manitoba Free Press is an insect of a different kind. The Prairie Jeremiah is afflicted with a mania for a change in the electoral system, for the adoption of proportional representation or the single or multiple interchangeable vote, or something of that kind—probably something of the kind that has made the job of governing Germany so simple. There has been an election in Germany under the complex system which is so fascinating to many reformers and muddle-heads there were fifteen or more different political parties seeking office in Germany. Representatives of all of those parties have been elected to the Reichstag, and if Germany is to have orderly government there will have to be some sort of coalition between the more powerful political parties to obtain it. There is consequently political chaos in Germany and consternation in the rest of Europe at the thought of what the political reactionists in power in Germany may do.

The complex Continental electoral system breeds parties. The simple British system contemplates but two parties, a party in power and a party in opposition, and although groups calling themselves independent may occasionally develop under that system, those groups are never sufficiently powerful to obstruct the processes of orderly government and prevent the expression of the will of the people.

"LET US FORGET"

Sir:—During the late visit of Sir Henry Thornton, he was reminded of the pledges made by the C.N.R. as far as Vancouver Island is concerned, have not been fulfilled. Sir Henry recognized the fact and stated that he would take the matter up with Mr. Tolmie with the end in view of doing full justice in every respect by extending assistance towards building Vancouver Island trunk roads. This is certainly a fine "windfall" that will bear fruit to the "tune" of $8,500,000 if we keep our eye on it and do not allow it to be overlooked.

Now for another "string to our bow." Mr. Beatty will be here this week. What about those charters held by the Canadian Pacific Railway for work that was to have been finished years ago on Vancouver Island? If they were of no value why were the charters renewed? He has mentioned two very important matters during his journey West that he will deal with, especially in aid of the unemployed. First, "Roads will be built to extend the tourist trade." Mr. Beatty has had in view Long Beach, on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, as one of the charters mentioned above is for a connection with that famous beach. Second, "Held-up work and overdue work will receive attention."

Mr. Beatty is in every sense a man of his word and if our public bodies do their duty during his visit here by reminding him of these important matters, much will be accomplished that will be of lasting benefit to Vancouver Island.

DANGEROUS CYCLISTS

Sir:—Having occasion to ride a bicycle from my work each night, it is astonishing how many boys I meet on bicycles without lights. The other night I met no less than five between Podo Bay Road and Shelbourne Street, via Haultain; four the next night and tonight I was almost on a level with five before I even reached Podo Bay Road. They were in a group on Shelbourne, and not one light among them. As I passed, one said to the others: "Where shall we go now?" indicating that they intended to continue riding around to the common danger.

I understood by an article I read in The Colonist some time ago that cyclists were to be forced to carry both lights and reflectors. If there is such a law existing, why is it not enforced? If there is no such law, then there should be one. Shelbourne Street is a very busy street, especially for autos, and does not boast of any street lights for a couple of miles at a stretch, which adds to the danger of pedestrians and all traffic on the road.

If such cyclists can see no danger to themselves by riding around in this manner, they might, at least have a little thought for the safety of others. It's of little use some being careful while others go to the other extreme.

Trusting something will be done immediately to put a stop to such dangerous practice, or it will surely result in some accident, and undoubtedly, as is often the case, the innocent will get it.

PART X

The Advantages of Confederation Summed Up

THE substance of dispatches received by Governor Seymour in May, 1867, led many to hope that union with Canada was imminent. The Governor was advised that, when the Canadian Parliament met for the first time, a measure would come before it to include in the Confederacy the whole of British North America save those provinces that declined to join. This news, and the fact that Alfred Waddington's scheme for an overland railway through British territory was making progress in London, seemed to indicate an early settlement of the colony's troubled situation.

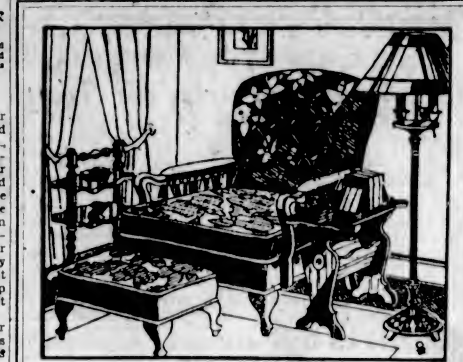

The question of annexation had been thoroughly aired. There still remained The British Colonist's self-appointed task of proving that its advantages were more imaginary than real, less stable and enduring than those offered by union with Canada. Confederation would give British Columbia what it most earnestly desired: a union for strength, for purposes of political, commercial, and social intercourse; a union that would bring responsible government, overland communication, and relief from financial embarrassment. It would promote the growth of a national sentiment in the country, and, in case of need, facilitate national defence. In the event of war, the province, with the rest of the Dominion, would be Britain's firm and uncompromising ally.

All measures introduced for the good of the Confederacy, such as the renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty with the United States, would benefit British Columbia as part of the union. When that treaty was abrogated, it had been openly stated that Canada would soon be starved into union with the United States. Instead, Canadians had begun to look for markets abroad, and considerable trade had been established with the West Indies and South America. Now there was some feeling across the line in favor of renewing the treaty, and in view of Canada's increased commercial interests, it could be renewed only on an equitable basis. British Columbia would have no share in such a pact if she were still outside the Confederacy.

Manufacturing was making steady progress in Canada, and union would bring to British Columbia Canadian goods duty free. It would be a profitable investment to load ships at Montreal or Quebec, and dispatch them around the Horn to Victoria. When railway communication with Canada was established Victoria was certain to become the British metropolis of the North Pacific. There were no safe or commodious harbors on the Mainland, from which she need fear competition. Annexation, on the other hand, would be the deathblow to Victoria's development. In spite of her strategic position on the route to Alaska, as an American town she would soon be ignored in favor of Seattle with its capacious harbor.

Annexation was a myth and a delusion. Any agitation for it was held up on the Mainland as another evidence of the disloyalty of the Islanders. Union with Canada was the only change conducive to the permanent happiness and prosperity of the country and its people.

Deadlock Between France and Italy On Navies Remains

Negotiations on Naval Disarmament Fruitless—Writer Blames Italy for Refusal to Present Actual Figures on Requirements

By JOHN GUNTHER
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—The Italian-French deadlock on naval disarmament has reached exactly the same point it had after three months of fruitless negotiations at London. Political conversations have failed for the moment and France has refused Italy's offer to apply parity only to new construction.

This "offer" was in fact no more than a device whereby Italy would get full parity, which France will not give her, in five or six years. The French are willing to consider parity only when it is applied exclusively to the Mediterranean. France, it is said, is quite willing to grant Italy equality in her own waters. But the absolute necessity of the French to keep a fleet in the Atlantic as well as in the Far East completely precludes any agreement on parity as a whole.

Faced with this reiteration of the London dilemma, some attempt, so far not considerable, has been made to get the Italians down to figures. The British are most strongly urging Italy to draw up an exact schedule of requirements like the French naval statute. The French have their figures on the table and always have had and are ready for a definite ton by ton discussion any moment.

MAY SEEK HOLIDAY

The Italians are being urged to give specific details of how many ships they want, where they want them, and when they want to build them. The best hope for an agreement is the fact that the Italians cannot afford to build up to the French, much less to outbuild them. It is chiefly the prestige lying in the word "parity" which prevents Italy from a frank acceptance of this situation.

If the Italians do produce tangible figures, which is always possible, then the French probably will be willing to reduce the naval statute. Meantime, if no agreement is reached by November, Italy will ask a continuation of the present building holiday. The penalty of disagreement is usually competition, not conciliation, but in this case Italy, supported by Great Britain, hopes that a holiday is possible.

VICTORIA HUNTERS AT LAKE COWICHAN GET GOOD SHOOTING

COWICHAN LAKE, Sept. 20.—A large covey was shot on Meads Creek by hunters from Ladysmith. Grouse are plentiful throughout this district, and fine birds grace many festive homes. Among those enjoying the hunting in this vicinity recently were Alexander and Errol Gillespie, of Victoria, who were guests of their brother, G. Kenneth Gillespie, a well-known hunter. They went some miles up the lake by launch, their hunt proving most satisfactory. Others from Victoria who made excellent bags were Messrs. Renfrew and Cliff Whittaker.

Leaves Dead Husband Disturbed Thinking Him to Be in Trance

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The London Daily News today said that Dr. William Teasdale Wilson, seventy-nine, died in his home at New Milton, near Lymington, for a week while his wife left him undisturbed, believing that he was in a spiritualistic trance. Dr. Wilson, who spent much of his life in America, was an enthusiastic Spiritualist, and, according to friends, he was apt to go into trances and remain in that condition for a long time.

Colonel Easterwood said the presentation would be made at a luncheon of the New York Advertising Club on October 10.

EXPECTS CUBA TO WITHDRAW OBJECTIONS

Present Opposition to World Court Revision Is Delegate's Personal Attitude

ACTION CAUSING NO ANXIETY IN STATES

By CONSTANTINE BROWN
(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Cuba's objection to the ratification of the protocol for the revision of the world court statute is not causing anxiety, it was stated today in well-informed quarters in Washington. It is not considered likely that Cuba's representative at Geneva will continue in his present attitude for a long time, especially since the reason which has prompted him to oppose ratification of the protocol are believed in some quarters to be mostly of a personal nature.

WILL NOT BE FORCED

The main objection to the new protocol is that Cuba does not want to appear to have its hands forced by the major powers. By a provision in the new statute of the Court of International Justice, the protocol should have gone into effect September 1 this year, even if all the signatory nations did not ratify it. The Council of the League of Nations, however, is satisfied that they have no objections to the coming into force of the amendments of the statute of the court annexed to the protocol.

Cuba has not ratified the protocol yet and its objections to the amendments are of such personal nature that the United States is not in a position to demand its ratification. The judge representing Cuba at the permanent court, Sanchez Bustamante, is a lawyer of great repute in his country.

MUST DROP OTHER AFFAIRS

The new amendments to Articles XVII and XXIV provide that "the members of the court may not exercise any political or administrative function nor engage in any occupation of a professional nature. No member of the court may act as agent, counsel or advocate in any case."

This means that those who desire to sit in the World Supreme Court must give up all connections with business or law practice. Realizing that such disqualification may mean serious financial sacrifice on the part of the jurists who are elected to the court and the nations which signed the protocol agreed that the judges must receive adequate payment and raised their salaries to $25,000 a year. However, the judge elected from Cuba considers that this would be too great a sacrifice if he had to sever all his business connections for the next nine years.

PERMANENTLY IN SESSION
The provisions of Article XXIII are equally distasteful. According to its text "the court shall remain permanently in session except during judicial vacations. Members of the court whose homes are situated at more than a day's normal journey from The Hague shall be entitled to a six-month leave every three years. They shall be bound, unless they are on regular leave or prevented from attending by illness, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the court."

The original statute of the court was much less drastic. It did not prevent judges from engaging in any occupation of a professional nature and deputy judges were permitted to act as agents or counsel when they were not called upon to exercise their court functions. Furthermore, the international court was not supposed to sit permanently.

It is easy to understand how distasteful these new provisions are for a man who has hitherto enjoyed the great honor of being a member of this Supreme Court of Justice and yet could look after his own business at home.

E. W. BEATTY TO ADDRESS CLUBS

C.P.R. Head Will Speak at Luncheon of Canadian and Kiwanis Clubs Tuesday

KUMTUKS TO BE BUSY

CLUB CALENDAR
MONDAY—Gyro Club luncheon in Empress Hotel, 12:15 p.m. Kumtuks business meeting, 8 p.m.
TUESDAY—Joint luncheon of Canadian and Kiwanis Clubs in Empress Hotel, 12 noon.
WEDNESDAY—Mrs. Ransome-Kehler addresses Kumtuks Club, Langley Street headquarters, at 8 p.m.
THURSDAY—Rotary Club luncheon in Empress Hotel, 12:15 p.m.
SATURDAY—Kumtuks Club benefit tea in New Thought Temple Hall, Fort Street, 3 p.m.

E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, will address a joint luncheon of the Canadian and Kiwanis Clubs on Tuesday at 12 noon, in the Empress Hotel. His subject will be "Transportation Progress."

Mr. Beatty has long been associated with the Canadian Pacific Railway, having entered the employ of the company in the year 1901 in the capacity of an assistant in the law department. After occupying the offices of assistant solicitor, general solicitor and general counsel, he became vice-president in the year 1914. In two years later that he was elected a director of the company, and afterwards became a member of the executive committee. He was named president in the year 1918.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE
The Canadian Pacific party includes Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Currie, and it is hoped that he will say a few words at the luncheon. In any case, it has been announced officially that he will be present.

The executive of the Kumtuks Club has called a special business meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the club's headquarters on Longley Street. Mrs. Ransome-Kehler, who represented Bahia at the Institute of Pacific Relations Conference last year, will address the club in its headquarters on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

On Saturday next the Kumtuks Olee Club will give a special benefit tea to raise funds for the Blakeburn relief subscription. This function will take place in the New Thought Temple Hall, at 3 p.m.

ROTARY PROGRAMME
The luncheon of the Rotary Club on Thursday will take the form of a series of humorous competitive classification talks among the members.

Arthur Stott, who represented Victoria at the British Empire games, will give his impressions at tomorrow's luncheon of the Gyro Club, to be held in the Empress Hotel.

Red Demonstration At Oshawa Halted

OSHAWA, Sept. 20.—An attempt by Communists to stage a demonstration here met with failure last night and the arrest of two men and one woman. Only a small crowd had gathered in the park to hear the Communist orators when police intervened and arrested Harold Elsen and Alice Beadman, both of Toronto, and John Banky, Oshawa, on a charge of distributing seditious literature.

NEW APARTMENT HOUSE PLANNED

Quarter Million Dollar Structure to Have All Modern Equipment

OAK BAY SITE CHOSEN

Vancouver Island Apartments Ltd., a company recently organized in Victoria, is planning the erection on a site selected in the municipality of Oak Bay, an apartment house which, the company claims, will be one of the finest of its kind on Vancouver Island.

An announcement was made earlier in the week that plans had been completed for the building of the apartment and that work would be commenced very shortly and the building ready for occupancy early in the Spring of 1931. The building, according to the company's prospectus, will cost over a quarter of a million dollars and will be modern in every respect, semi-fireproof, of fifty-one suites, and, in addition, a fully fireproof garage to house fifty-one autos.

ON MARINE DRIVE

The site of the proposed apartment is located in Oak Bay on the Marine Drive, overlooking the municipal park and within half a block of the street railway lines. The location, for an apartment such as planned, is one of the finest in Victoria and overlooks the Straits and, so long as the municipal park remains park property, will have an unobstructed view of the sea and adjacent islands.

Judging from the sketch plan prepared by the company's architects, James & Clark, Victoria, the proposed building has all outward signs of being superbly beautiful and of a style that will fit in well with the surrounding landscape. The design of the building will be an adaptation of English domestic architecture of the Elizabethan period and so planned that ninety per cent the suites will overlook the sea and mountains. The exterior walls are to be finished with rough, colored waterproof stucco heavily tinted with various earthy colors. The roofing is to be of tile and an imposing tower will rise above the main entrance.

It is planned to have all suites equipped with the most modern appliances. The majority of the living-rooms in the suites are to have open fireplaces. Every suite is planned to give the maximum of light and healthy ventilation during the chilly months will be steam heated. Each floor is to be served by an automatic electric elevator.

INTERIOR DECORATIONS

The interior decorations, the specifications indicate, will have striped colored plaster ceilings and friezes and the walls will be paneled with wooden beam effect in the public rooms. The apartment are to be finished in colored plaster and enameled woodwork. The floors will be of oak.

A community dining-room is planned as one of the features of the proposed building. Other features will be twin combination sinks in all kitchens, reception hall with clothes cupboards in all suites, trunk room accommodation, office, page boy and maid services.

It is stated by the company officials that ninety per cent of the material to be used in the apartment house will be of Canadian manufacture.

COMPANY OFFICERS

The officers of the company are as follows: Col. Borge de Mossin, president; H. E. Boorman, vice-president; H. D. Dore, director; G. E. Yearwood, director; T. L. Swan, secretary-treasurer. The auditors are Messrs. Ismay, Bolton, Holden Co., Victoria; architects, James & Clark, Victoria. The registered office of the company is at 918 Government Street, Victoria.

TO BAN TAXI PLANES AT LANSOWNE FIELD

Industrial Committee of Council to Prohibit Use of Airport for Paid Passengers

Regulations prohibiting further use of Lansdowne Flying Field for taxi plane purposes will be issued early next week, it was stated Saturday by Alderman W. T. Strath, chairman of the industrial committee of the City Council. Notices will be posted at the field warning all airmen that it is against the regulations to carry passengers for profit.

In announcing the new regulations Alderman Strath said Lansdowne Field was only licensed as an emergency landing place for planes and for the use of pleasure planes arriving and departing from that point.

"Much as we regret that we cannot permit further taxi business at the field, we must be governed by the Government air regulations," said Mr. Strath.

The new order is made effective on the recommendation of the industrial committee members, who met recently to consider the matter.

4 Years Without HEADACHE

How do you deal with headaches? Do you just take something to deaden the pain without getting rid of the trouble which causes the pain? Thousands do, despite the medical profession's warning cry of "DON'T!"

Such makeshift methods simply suppress the symptoms of headaches. They merely numb the nerves and leave the underlying cause to look after itself. And it only obtains a firmer grip. Headaches can generally be traced to a disordered stomach and to the unexpended nervous energy in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them from forming again and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts bring swift and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter.

"For many years I suffered from severe headaches almost daily," started taking the small dose of (Kruschen) a matter of four years ago, and I can honestly say I have never had a headache since!" (Mrs. M. W.) (Adv.)

Dial Telephone Demonstrators

are visiting telephone subscribers

OUR demonstrators are visiting all telephone subscribers in Victoria to explain how to use the new dial telephones which will be placed in service late this year.

The demonstrators—men and women—will also test the dial telephones to make sure they are in good working order.

We have opened a downtown demonstration office at 620 Fort St. (opposite the Pemberton Building) where anyone may drop in and be shown how to use the dial telephones. There is a model telephone exchange on exhibition there for those who wish to see what happens in the central exchange when a dial telephone is operated.

You will find the dial telephones easy to use

Canadian Daughters

The monthly social meeting of the Canadian Daughters' League Assembly No. 5, which was held in the Shrine Temple on Friday evening, was well attended. After a short business session, the conduct of the meeting was handed over to the members of No. 4 group under the direction of Mrs. E. Stewart. The programme consisted of an interesting and entertaining account of a recent airplane trip from Fresno, Cal., to Seattle, made by Mrs. H. Davy, one of the Assembly members, in the record time of nine hours. Mrs. W. D. Todd contributed some delightful solos, and Miss D. Willing gave a comprehensive and instructive paper on the "History of the Canadian Daughters' League and their Aims and Objects." Refreshments were served and a vote of thanks was tendered the artists and the membership of the group by Mrs. Keefe and Mrs. Charles for the pleasant evening provided.

Sir M. B. Begbie Chapter

The members of the Sir Matthew Begbie Chapter, I.O.D.E., met at the home of the regent, Mrs. E. E. Wootton, Victoria Avenue, on Friday evening. Arrangements were discussed for a lecture to be given by Rev. J. Anle in the near future on "The Pender Harbor Hospital." The secretary was instructed to communicate with Mr. Anle with regard to arranging a date. The sum of $15 was voted towards the expenses of equipment for the hospital under his direction. In addition to the reading and receiving of routine reports plans were discussed covering the major activities of the chapter for the coming months.

Somenos Auxiliary

The Somenos St. Mary's Women's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. T. L. Dunkley last week. It was the first meeting after the summer vacation, and there was a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Tisdall, read a letter from Dr. Katherine Travis, which appeared in the "Living Message," dealing with the suffering of the women and children during the fighting in Hunan. Much sympathy was expressed for the missionary women in their period of trial. The question of a sale of work in November was discussed and plans were made.

Daughters of England

Lodge Primrose No. 32, Daughters of England, will meet on Friday evening in the S.O.E. Hall, for a social meeting, at 7:30 o'clock, which will be followed by a dance and card party at 8:30 o'clock. Members are reminded of the rummage sale to be held on Saturday morning, at 857 Johnson Street, below Government Street. Parcels may be left on Friday afternoon at the store, or phone 1650R or 7575H, and parcels will be called for.

Junior W.A.

A meeting of the Junior Women's Auxiliary of the Jubilee Hospital will be held tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock at the nurses' home, when plans will be discussed for the fashion show which is to be held at the Empress Hotel early in October. The auxiliary is co-operating with Angus Campbell, Limited, in arranging this show, which promises to be an outstanding event of interest to women.

To Attend Service

The A.Y.P.A. Bible class and the A.Y.P.A. will attend the evening service at St. John's tonight. Rev. Canon Chadwick has chosen for his theme a subject of special interest to young people, "The Church's Call to Youth." After the service refreshments will be served in the guild room, and all other young people are invited to attend.

Purple Star Lodge

The regular meeting of Victoria Purple Star Lodge 104 L.O.B.A. was held recently in the Orange Hall. Worthing Mistress Mrs. Wright presiding. Good reports were turned in for the rummage sale. The next meeting will be held on October 1, followed by a five hundred drive.

Britannia L.O.B.A.

The regular meeting of Britannia L.O.B.A. No. 216, was held recently. Mrs. Nicholas, worthy mistress, presided. One member was advanced to a higher degree. Sister Caldwell, convener of the coming sale of work, reported progress. The next sewing class will be held at the home of Mrs. Groves on Thursday. All members and friends are cordially invited.

Court Maple Leaf, A.O.F.

The ladies of Court Maple Leaf met at the home of Mrs. Penney last week for the usual sewing class. It was decided to hold a card game at their next court meeting in aid of the bazaar fund. It is hoped all members will make an effort to be there to make it a success.

Mooseheart Legion

The next regular meeting of the Victoria Chapter No. 25, Women of Mooseheart Legion, will be held in the K. of G. Hall, Government Street, tomorrow evening, at 7:30 o'clock. A whist drive will follow the meeting, commencing at 8:30 o'clock.

Somenos W.A.

The Junior W.A. of St. Mary's Church, Somenos, held its first meeting since the summer holidays on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. A. Tisdall. There was a fair attendance of members.

Municipal Chapter

Municipal Chapter, I.O.D.E., will meet at 5 o'clock on Tuesday, in the headquarters, Union Building. A full attendance is requested.

Choral Society

The Fairfield Choral Society will hold its first meeting of the season in the auditorium of the Sir James Douglas School on Wednesday, at 8 p.m. A full attendance is desired for election of officers and other business.

Diaphanous Lace Evening Frocks

LACE always seems to maintain a place in the evening mode and this year it is particularly suitable. Cream tulle is combined with cream lace in the gown shown in the Vogue sketch at the left above. The double circular sleeve caps are a modern interpretation of a Victorian mode. Grege chiffon is combined with lace in the same shade for the dinner dress also sketched. Lace lengthens the skirt and gives a camisole effect to the bodice. On the right is a photo-graph of a formal black lace evening dress. Its low back and separate cape with ties are high fashion details.—Sketch by Vogue.

TODAY'S RECIPE

ICE Cream Sandwich—Here is an idea for varying the service of ice cream. An ice cream jam sandwich, made simply by spreading raspberry jam on a thick slice of ice cream, covering with another slice and serving with raspberry sauce. Vary this by serving ice cream between halves of canned peaches and using raspberry sauce made from canned raspberries. The flavor may be changed by using syrups made from canned apricots, plums, strawberries, poaching and chilling some of the fruit.

Gymnastic—the public speaker, who, finding he hadn't a leg to stand on, immediately hopped to another subject.

Smart Afternoon Bags

Smaller Types Seem to Be Favorites This Season—Muffs Are Seen Again

SMART AFTERNOON BAGS

Time was when one good, staid handbag was all that one needed, says an article in The New York Times. But when street clothes are as sharply distinguished from afternoon ones as morning is from night, the same handbag for both is out of the question. Very decidedly what will go with tweeds will not go with furs and silks, not to mention that the tweeds are quite likely to be brown this season and the silks and furs black.

There is also a considerable difference in the correct sizes for daytime and formal handbags. Those that go with our street clothes and coats are plenty large enough for shopping list, a sample or two and all the odds and ends that invariably strain a bag's capacity. But afternoon bags are usually small, for one needs to carry it only a handkerchief, change purse and compact.

FAVORED MATERIALS

By their size, then, are they known. And by their materials, frames and ornaments, too. Antelope heads the list of materials with heavy crepe, moire and slipper satin following close behind. With all the contrariness of which fashions are generally capable, many of the antelope bags are crushed in soft folds as if the leather were a soft fabric, while the silks frequently make little stiff-chapped bags.

There are all sorts of shapes—pouches, semi-envelope bags, softly gathered ones on frames. Some have no handles, others have a back strap and still others have fine chain handles. In this respect it is a case of suiting one's self.

NOVEL DECORATIONS

But it is their decorations that particularly distinguish them from their less formal neighbors. Frames set with real semi-precious stones, such as turquoise, or frames covered with a delicate patterning of mosaic, are lovely against black bags and costumes. Lift-locks sometimes take the form of a basket of flowers done in Goullier style; or, again, they are fashioned from a bit of carved crystal or jade. Real tortoise shell has been used for ornaments and whole frames and is both new and smart on black antelope. Mosaic-set initials are always a distinguished accent for a corner of a formal envelope.

For the individualist who can afford to satisfy her whims, there are beautiful afternoon bags made of real antique Persian and Oriental brocade; or she may prefer to match her costume with a bag made to order of the same material.

NEW MUFFS

If one of the new muffs is to be part of an afternoon costume, the bag question requires special consideration. One may select a muff that has its own purse, or a bag small enough to slip in the muff, or a handle bag that can be hung on the arm.

Women's Institutes of Vancouver Island

VIMY

Vimy Women's Institute met at the home of the president, Mrs. T. C. Robson, on Friday evening. Plans were made for the institute activities during the winter months. A letter was received from Duncan Chamber of Commerce regarding the proposed market in Duncan. The members approved of the market plan and promised their cooperation. Mrs. G. Bergman and Mrs. Robson will represent Vimy Institute at the Vancouver Island Conference, to be held in Victoria, October 22 and 23.

LAKE HILL

Arrangements are complete for the dance to be held on Wednesday, in the Lake Hill Community Hall, under the auspices of the Women's Institute. A three-piece orchestra will supply the music for dancing, from 8 to 10 o'clock, and refreshments will be served.

Port Alberni

Mrs. J. L. Dunn was a hostess yesterday afternoon when she entertained a number of children with a golf competition and story contest. The guests were Joan Wright, Helen Wright, Muriel Stocker, Lois Turner, Betty MacPhee, Enid West, Margaret Carter, Katherine Weaver, Marjorie Carter, Mary MacMillan and Ona Wensmiller. Mrs. Dunn was assisted by Mrs. R. Brown and Miss Marie Larsen.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cornish have as their guest Mrs. William Richardson, of Vancouver.

Mrs. Cowell, of Vancouver, formerly of Port Alberni, is spending the week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bogaert at their summer home on Sprout Lake.

Young People Meet

A meeting was held last week at St. David's Hall to organize a Welsh Young People's Society. Mr. Lewis Evans was elected president; Phyllis Williams, secretary; and Enid Target, treasurer. All young Welsh people interested in this society and who would care to join, are asked to phone the secretary, 1870R2, for further information.

A Turn of Fortune's Wheel

By EDGAR PICKERING

They had tea in a small upstairs room at a confectioner's, his only customers that afternoon, and they chose a place beside the window where the sunshine shone on Joyce as she lifted a cup, handing it to Dick as though it were nothing out of the way for them to take a meal together. There was a homeliness in the act that pleased him as he took the cup, for it was a foretaste of what might be, and the thought came of having her always with him. What a white pretty hand Joyce had, yet it was not that nor the sweet beauty of her face that accounted for his feeling of devotion, but something deeper and more abiding than admiration. If he could have analysed his love for her he would have known that she was part of his soul, the better part purifying it. He was a great deal too prosaic to do that, however, but never had a man loved a woman with more devoutness and sincerity than he loved Joyce. She was the only one in the world whom he had ever loved—a pal in whom he could confide and ask counsel—a wife whose love was without price.

back to England," he said. "What I was thinking about just now, Well, I'll tell you. It's summed up in one word. You. It was the longing to see you once more, to hear your voice and look into the eyes of the woman I love, which brought me back. For I've loved you, Joyce, ever since we first met each other, and I shall go on loving you until I'm dead. And after that, I hope, is it any use my telling you all this? Can you love me well enough to be my wife?"

There were tears of happiness as well as of sorrow, and Joyce's eyes were dim with ineffable gladness, but for all that Dick read her answer in them.

"I've always loved you, Dick," she said in her trustful simple way, and he took her in his arms. There was no need for him to say another word—their clinging embrace was so eloquent of what her heart was crying aloud and his kisses were on her lips in a lingering caress divinely blissful.

"There's no reason for our waiting," he said, as they went back to London an hour later. "And I hope you understand what I had in mind when I told you about my position—about the money part. I've got to think of now, and for your sake I wish I was as rich as Sir Aylmer."

"Dick," and Joyce nestled closer to his side. "You're jealous of him?"

"I'm only sorry for the poor chap," replied Dick, "and you're not going to put me off. Will you marry me in month's time?"

"There's so much to be done first."

"It can be done afterwards. A month from today?"

"Very well," replied Joyce.

Mrs. Trudge was more than delighted when she was told, for her prophecy had been fulfilled.

"To say the truth, my dear," she said, "I've been expecting it, and if I had a daughter of my own I would trust her to him. He'll take care of you although he waits taking care of himself. Landladies may be attentive, but there's no one like a wife. Now where are you going to live?"

"We haven't thought of that," replied Joyce laughingly.

"You see, you must live somewhere," continued Mrs. Trudge, "so why not with us? There's more room in the house than we shall ever need."

The next day Joyce had to tell of her engagement was Mrs. Gervaise.

"My dear," and the little lady put her mitted hand on Joyce's with a tender touch, "marriage is a very serious business. I'm an old woman and have known the end of a good many married folks, and if marriages are made in heaven, as people say they are, some have been sadly ill-arranged. But you're going to be happy, I'm certain, and must bring Mr. Hardy to see me. I wonder what Mr. Stephen Henshaw will say. It isn't in my hearing, you may be sure."

Joyce had already written to Mrs. Beresford, who handed the letter to Beatrice after reading it.

"There was not any occasion for her to write," said the former. "It is quite unimportant to me that she is to be married."

Beatrice took the letter languidly, reading it with a slight raising of her brow.

"Richard Hardy of all people," she remarked, "Poor fellow," and the letter was allowed to flutter to the floor.

"Do you know anything of Mr. Hardy's position?" continued her mother. "Has Stephen ever spoken of his cousin?"

"Not to my recollection," and Beatrice yawned slightly. The talk bored her, and she had something to divert her thoughts from it, for last night she had been at a function where a minor royalty had spoken to her, and to discuss people like Dick Hardy and Joyce was impossible.

Dick was to have as his best man an old college chum named Montford who had recently returned to England and was living in London.

"He went out to the Colonies—New Zealand I think—after leaving college and I lost sight of him. He only came back a few weeks ago."

Joyce had been introduced to him and Dick insisted on his going with them to the Trudges, where Montford speedily ingratiated himself in Mrs. Trudge's good graces, entertaining her by describing his experiences abroad, and Joyce listened to him feeling happier than ever, now that Dick had met his old friend.

"You would never think that Montford has a past as the lady novelist call it," he told her next day when they were on a shopping excursion—Joyce had left Mr. Vellum's shop—"He was killed and that sent him abroad where I know anything of Montford he had a fairly lively time. He told me he had mixed with a very queer lot of people in Sydney."

"I fancy he was reckless after being treated so badly," said Joyce.

"It was a blessing in disguise," replied Dick. "I happen to know the lady," and Joyce changed the conversation.

"Do you ever see Mr. Henshaw?" she asked.

"Only rarely. I hear about Mrs. Henshaw though, who seems to be making a name for herself."

"Beatrice is to be presented at the next drawing-room," continued Joyce. "Mrs. Trudge reveals in society news and she told me. I've been cast off; sent to Coventry," and she laughed merrily. "They answered my letters, and once when . . . No, I won't tell you that—it's not of the slightest importance, but it was when I had called on Mrs. Gervaise. That reminds me, Dick, were to lunch with her today?"

The old lady made Joyce tell her every detail of the wedding arrangements.

"We haven't much money," Joyce told her at lunch, "and so we are to live with Mr. and Mrs. Trudge. Dick wanted to take a house, but I persuaded him to wait. There's plenty of time for that."

"There's plenty of time for more than starting housekeeping," replied Mrs. Gervaise, her dark eyes twinkling. "One never knows what may happen to alter all our plans. What do you say, Mr. Hardy?"

"I don't want ours altered," he answered. "I took the line of least resistance and whatever Joyce decides is bound to be right."

"If you always think like that, you and she ought to be happy. Be kind to her, but I know you will be. I'm not so foolish as to despise money—no truthful person is, yet you can make shift without riches— you can't do without love, even if you're a millionaire, and real love grows more beautiful as the years go by."

Joyce's wedding had come and gone. The day when Dick had walked down the aisle of a little church with his bride on his arm, he was one of the happiest, proudest men in England. It had been a quiet ceremony, and after a health drinking ceremony in the Trudge's parlor, they had driven away on their honeymoon, leaving Mr. Trudge and Montford waving them adieu from the front step.

A month later and the world had resumed its everyday work. Dick was looking out for a post, for Joyce had to be thought of in quite a different way from what he had done before, and he was walking home one afternoon from an interview with some people that promised well when he encountered Montford, and they went on together until the latter stopped suddenly.

"Do you see that man?" he asked, pointing to some one who had alighted from a taxi. "I thought I recognized him some two months ago."

"He happens to be a relative of mine," said Dick. "We're not on very friendly terms. He married the daughter of a Mrs. Beresford. His name is Henshaw, and if he hadn't appeared out of the unknown, I should be better off than I am. He's a nephew—the senior, I'll call him, of my late uncle, Mr. Henshaw of Blackheath, and as his claim to the estate came before mine—well, he's worth six or seven thousand a year, and I'm looking out for a job."

"Henshaw," and Montford repeated the name to himself. "Where does he hang out?"

Dick gave him Henshaw's address, and they walked on.

CHAPTER XVI

Reclining on a couch, Mrs. Beresford, arrayed in an elaborate tea gown, had been discussing the ball which Beatrice was to give at the Ritz in a few weeks.

"Lady Montrose insisted on my engaging the Balkan Troubadours band," said Beatrice, who was sitting with her hands clasped behind her head in an attitude of listlessness.

"I've been told that it's very expensive," replied Mrs. Beresford.

"Frightfully. I could have had an English band for half the money, but one has to be in the swim. The best people positively clamor for the Balkans, and I was lucky to get them."

"I'm sure it's very good of Lady Montrose to interest herself as she does in everything," continued Mrs. Beresford. "What a help she must be to you."

"She knows everyone worth knowing, and I'm expected. Rajah—I think she called him that or a Sultan, I'm not quite certain what he is in fact, but anyhow Ernestine said his friends are simply gorgeous, and she secured him for me."

"I can't say I care for black men, remarked her mother.

"How awful provincial of her," laughed Beatrice. "He's no more black than you are—really quite nice. There's heaps of the smartest set coming, and it ought to be a success. I'll tell you something more."

"What is it?"

"Lady Montrose has used her influence and I'm to be presented to Mrs. Beresford almost sprang off the couch.

"My dear! It was nearly a shout and all that she could say."

"I've waited until Ernestine was certain, before telling you, and now it's settled I do wish you wouldn't get excited," said Beatrice calmly.

"The Duchess of Rye is to see me through as Ernestine calls it."

Mrs. Beresford's motherly pride was almost too much for her.

"I'm sure it's very kind of her," she answered. "If I knew Lady Montrose I should certainly tell her how much obliged we are to her for taking such trouble."

"For Heaven's sake, don't," exclaimed Beatrice. "People don't do that sort of thing. It's horribly bad form—just what an ordinary person would do."

"I am more than pleased in spite of that. Lady Montrose must have a very good heart."

Beatrice gave a resigned little laugh. "The people I associate with don't talk of their hearts, my good mother. You're getting sentimental in your old age. I've got another bit of news for you. Ernestine and I are going to Monte Carlo after my ball. She knows the ropes and we intend to have a good time. And now you can have your usual nap, for I promised Lady Montrose to meet her at three for the park and Gustav will think I'm never coming."

Gustav was her French chauffeur who had taught her to drive, and Lady Ernestine Montrose was to be picked up at the club for Beatrice's accustomed spin.

"It was Mrs. Gervaise's custom also to drive in the park and Joyce had promised to accompany her that afternoon on what the old lady called an "siring." She was about to leave the house when Montford came in.

"I'm not going to detain you one minute, Mrs. Hardy," he said, going on in a rather incoherent way to state the reason for his visit.

"I want to see Dick—it's imperative. Not at home, you say. People never are when they are wanted, particularly to be at home. It's late—nothing but sheer, blind fate. Where is he?"

"It's impossible for me to tell you. I don't know where he is nor will he be back. Has anything happened? You seem very serious."

"I've been called away when I ought to stop in London, but it's simply impossible for me to explain. It's too vast—too overwhelming."

Joyce was looking at him, perplexed by his impetuous speech.

"Then don't try to explain, but you're very mysterious, and I may remind you that you are keeping me longer than a minute."

"Madam," and Montford bowed. "I offer you ten thousand pardons, but I dare not explain. You wouldn't believe me if I did."

"I'll tell Dick that you have called."

"I think that it would be as well to mention that he may probably be stunned. It will be a preparation, but I will say no more, and with this Montford hurried away."

Never had Joyce looked more attractive than when she entered Mrs. Gervaise's drawing-room, dressed in a most becoming costume and daintily hat, that Dick had bought for his young wife on his own responsibility, and Mrs. Gervaise smiled approvingly as she welcomed her.

"You match the weather," she said. "You're both charming."

The old lady's air was always aristocratic, and she charges for introducing people like Mrs. Henshaw into society."

"She seemed to be very friendly with Beatrice."

"Don't you believe it, my dear," snapped Mrs. Gervaise. "She wouldn't be seen with Mrs. Henshaw unless it paid. I shouldn't be surprised if there's a dressmaker dunning for her bill and Mrs. Henshaw has undertaken to pay it."

F. & W. Corporation Planning Purchase of Metropolitan Stores

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Herald Tribune today says in part: "Negotiations are under way for F. & W. Stores, Inc., to acquire the Canadian units of Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc., it was officially announced yesterday. The transaction probably will be accomplished by an outright purchase."

The proposed acquisition involves fifty-two stores in Canada, operated at present by Metropolitan Stores, Ltd., a subsidiary. The Granddiner Chain will be increased to 203 stores. As a holding company F. & W. Granddiner Stores, Ltd., owns practically all of the common stock of F. & W. Grand 5-10-25-Cent Stores, Inc., and Isaac Silver & Brothers, Inc. Through these subsidiaries it operates more than 150 units with an annual sales volume of about $35,000,000."

"She may not have seen us," suggested Joyce.

"She saw us quite well, but I'm not going to be put out. That was Lady Ernestine Montrose with her."

She laughed as the heavy landau rolled on. "And between you and me, you may be sure your step-sister pays for driving her about. The Montroses haven't a penny, but they're connected with half the aristocracy, and she charges for introducing people like Mrs. Henshaw into society."

"She seemed to be very friendly with Beatrice."

"Don't you believe it, my dear," snapped Mrs. Gervaise. "She wouldn't be seen with Mrs. Henshaw unless it paid. I shouldn't be surprised if there's a dressmaker dunning for her bill and Mrs. Henshaw has undertaken to pay it."

Consecration of Cathedral Took Place a Year Ago

Anniversary Next Sunday of Colorful Procession and Impressive Ceremonies of Opening of Notable Edifice—Unity With Mother Church in England Emphasized

Bishop Schofield Will Be Preacher

NO event in the church life of this city drew to itself as wide and deep an interest as did the consecration of Christ Church Cathedral, the first anniversary of which will be celebrated by a series of services, beginning next Sunday. The erection of this noble edifice was the realization of a dream cherished for two generations and an achievement that did honor to the diocese and the bishop whose episcopal chair is placed near its altar.

The historic occasion is fresh in the memory of participants and spectators. Twenty bishops, representative of the ecclesiastical provinces of British Columbia, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, and of the Mother Church in England, along with 100 clergy, choir members and church officials, met in the old frame cathedral a block away. Here the Metropolitan of British Columbia, Archbishop de Pencier, spoke the last prayer within walls that were dedicated fifty-two years before, and which had risen over the charred ruins of the first cathedral, built in 1838.

In sonorous tones that coursed along the aisles, filling ambulatories and bays and rising above the bowed heads of the worshippers from arch to arch to the remotest point of the groined and vaulted roof.

UNITY WITH ENGLAND

The sermon was preached by Dr. Theodore Woods, Bishop of Winchester, amplifiers carrying his message to the large gathering outside the walls. The presence of Dr. Woods, as of Dr. Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London, three years before, who laid the corner stone, was recognized as evidence of the close bond between the mother to its particular service, the visiting national churches in the dominions. The unity with the Old Land and the continuity of the church was further visualized in the twelve stones upon which the foundation stone is set, which came from a church in Canterbury and some of which were consecrated fourteen centuries ago. These can be seen in the northeast tower, roughed with plaster and bearing marks of chisel and drill of long-forgotten craftsmen.

CREDIT TO DIOCESE

The nave only is completed, at a cost of $350,000. Three years previously the Memorial Hall was built at a cost of $100,000. When completed the cathedral will be the largest Anglican house of worship in Canada. The erection of these two buildings within five years was generally held to be an achievement of high order. The diocese of only forty-eight parishes, some of them Indian and Oriental, and with more than half of the thirty-five receiving missionary aid. The diocesan authorities have stated, however, that the missionary and general church contributions have not suffered but on the contrary have increased. The courage of the diocese and of the Christ Church congregation in building so noble an edifice has been widely commented upon in Anglican circles throughout the world. A picture of the cathedral was given in the special edition of The London Times issued for the reopening of St. Paul's Cathedral.

UNUSUAL SERVICE HELD

A somewhat unusual service was held when the cathedral authorities placed the cathedral at the disposal of the religious bodies of the city to hold, at the request of Mayor Anson, a community service in connection with the entrance of the newly-elected City Council upon its duties. Taking part in this service, which was largely attended, were the Mayor and Revs. T. W. Gladstone, H. P. S. Lattrell, Dr. W. G. Wilson and Dean Quinlan.

The anniversary sermon will be preached next Sunday morning by Bishop Schofield, who is expected home this week from the Lambeth Conference of Anglican bishops in London, England. During the past year a Cathedral Chapter was instituted of which Dr. Quinlan is dean and Rev. P. A. F. Chadwick and Rev. A. E. de L. Nunns are local canons. Dean Quinlan's assistants are Revs. F. A. Ramsey, E. W. P. Carter, A. G. E. Munson, who is priest-in-charge at St. Matthew's Mission, and A. M. Acheson-Lyle. The rector's warden is H. E. Beasley and the people's warden, J. H. Hinton. The organist and choir master is Stanley Bulley.

POPULAR PROGRAMME RETURNS TO THE AIR

Ident Big Brother Club to Be Heard Again a Week From Today

After an absence of several months the Ident Big Brother Club will return to the air over a National Broadcasting Company network beginning Sunday, September 28.

Bob Emery, popular young people's radio entertainer, will present his regular Big Brother Club, which is already known to thousands of boys and girls throughout New England. Besides his own repertoire of original songs and stories, Big Brother will regale his listeners each week with a "hero" dramatization. The Club will be presented Sunday afternoons at 4 o'clock, Pacific standard time, by the makers of Ident localities. Each programme will last half an hour.

HIS ORIGINAL CLUB

Emery plans to bring his original club to the NBC network for the series. Such features as his Radio Rascals, spelling bees for boys and girls of all ages, his lighthouse and coalguard news exchange and science talks given by Dr. Lunt, will be heard during the new series.

Bob Emery, known to most every youngster in New England—and grown-ups, too—as Big Brother, has been singing, joking and telling stories with his juvenile audience from Station WEEI, Boston, since 1925.

SKETCH ON PROGRAMME

Eight minutes of the thirty-minute programme will be devoted to the sketch. Burke Boyce, NBC continuity editor, will be the author of these dramatizations. The sketches will be based on the virtues of life. Big Brother will begin to tell his listeners a story which will fade into the sketch. Established radio actors will play the parts in these sketches, in which an attempt will be made to combine educational authenticity with glamour and action.

Joe Rimes, well-known Boston maestro, will conduct the Joy Spreaders, who will supply the incidental music for the programme.

TORONTO LEADER OF Y.M.C.A. IS HEARD BY STAFF YESTERDAY

At a luncheon of the directors and staff of the Y.M.C.A. yesterday, the report of Charles Bauckham, Toronto, president of the West End branch of the Toronto "Y," treasurer of the Y.M.C.A. National Council, was received. Mr. Bauckham is managing director of the Sterling Trusts Corporation of Toronto, and in Victoria on a business trip for his company. While in the West, Mr. Bauckham is investigating the Y.M.C.A. work.

During the meeting, Mr. Bauckham discussed several changes in the Y.M.C.A. national organization, but as these are as yet merely suggestions, they have not been made public.

After enjoying a round of golf at Colwood yesterday, Mr. Bauckham left for Seattle.

"Now is the time to buy next winter's raincoat," says an advertisement. Fortunately, the weather anticipated this advice a couple of weeks ago.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

The Truth at Last

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The truth will out if you but wait. Alas, it is sometimes too late.

—Mother West Wind.

Peter Rabbit was getting very much provoked. Peter doesn't often lose his temper, but he was very near to losing it now. You see, he had a feeling that he was the victim of a joke. He had the feeling that Striped Chipmunk was playing a joke on him. First he would see Striped Chipmunk on the old stone wall, then he would hear a noise in the other direction, and turning his head he would see a black Chipmunk. When he looked back Striped Chipmunk would be gone, only to reappear where he had seen, or thought he had seen, the black Chipmunk. It was getting so that Peter didn't know whether he was dreaming or awake. He didn't know whether he was really seeing things or thinking that he was seeing things. But he had a strong suspicion that it was all the fault of Striped Chipmunk.

"If I ever catch that little scamp," muttered Peter to himself, "I'll teach him that he can't play tricks with me."

"Did you ever catch him?" inquired a voice. Peter whirled about. There sat Striped Chipmunk on a big stone and beside him sat—what do you think? Why, it was another Chipmunk, dressed wholly in black. There they sat, side by side, Striped Chipmunk and the coal-black stranger. Both were grinning at Peter.

"Well, Peter," said Striped Chipmunk, "what do you see now?"

Yes, sir, both were grinning at Peter.

"Well, Peter," said Striped Chipmunk, "what do you see now?"

"I—I—" began Peter, and stopped. He didn't know what to say. Striped Chipmunk chuckled. "I don't wonder you were puzzled," Peter said he. "This is one of my last family of children. I have named him Impy. Even Black Pussy the Cat is no blacker. I have heard it said that one of my great-great, ever-so-great, grandfathers was a black cat, which may or may not explain how Impy came by his. He has been keeping pretty much out of sight, but, of course, he has had to come out some time, and you and Sammy Jay and one or two others have had glimpses of him."

Peter gave a great sigh. Striped Chipmunk looked at him inquiringly. "It's a great relief," said Peter.

"What is a great relief?" asked Striped Chipmunk.

"To know that my eyes are all right," replied Peter, "and to know that I know that I'm awake. I remember that Reddy Fox one time had a son with a black coat, but I didn't suppose that there ever was a black cat in the Chipmunk family. If I were in Impy's place, I know what I would do."

"What would you do?" asked Striped Chipmunk.

"I would sleep all day and travel around at night," replied Peter.

"What for?" asked Impy, speaking for the first time.

"Because I would feel safer then," replied Peter. "I don't believe that even Hooty the Owl, despite his wonderful eyes, would be able to see you running around in the Black Shadows."

"Humph!" said Striped Chipmunk. "He wouldn't be able to see himself. You see, Peter, we squirrels have been given eyes for light, not for dark. Now, it doesn't seem to make a great deal of difference to you whether you are running around at night or in the daytime. But it does make a great deal of difference. So I guess Impy will have to live like the rest of us Chipmunks, even if he doesn't look like us."

The next story: "Black Pussy Is Too Late."

"Troubles never come singly." No, they're all married and have large families.

LOCATE YOUR HOUSE CORRECTLY ON LOT

Improvement in Plot Plan is Aid to Beauty and Convenience of Home

Hardly any phase of building receives so little attention beforehand as the plot plan and the relation of the structure to its surroundings. The house is a blue print to most persons, and how it will look in its actual location is neglected.

The plot plan locates the house upon the lot. But this cannot be done without designing the entire space—including and placing all things that the finished home may need. One should not place a house without knowing where the drive is to be, nor even design it without this knowledge, because the kitchen should be on the driveway side and the coal chute also.

One should not place a porch or terrace without knowing where the outside area will be to which they are supposed to relate. Too long have we thought that a plot plan can come after building, when, as a matter of fact, its greatest usefulness is over.

GARAGE IS OFTEN MISPLACED
If a lot is wide, the house should not be placed in the centre, but close to the driveway so that an area as large as possible will remain on the side of the living-room. In this case the principal windows of the living-room should face this outlook. If the major outside area is to the rear, the main opening in the living-room should face that way.

The "service" drive, garage and drying space should be arranged as compactly as possible. The drive, in order not to interfere with the other uses of the rear lawn, should reach the garage as directly as possible. Too often the garage is misplaced.

SHOULD PLAN AS ONE UNIT
A large part of the pleasure of suburban living comes from the out-of-door; hence the value of designing it. Every home owner should recognize this fundamental fact and plan his house and grounds as one unit.

His front yard should provide a setting for the house, and it should also add to the beauty and harmony of the street picture; his backyard should be an out-of-door living-room in fact, providing for the recreational demands of the entire family. Such results can only be accomplished by thoughtful planning before building and then artistic planting.

Sonny had just returned from his first Sunday school. He beamed proudly as he announced that the minister had spoken to him. Father—Oh, and what did he say to you?
Sonny—He told me to keep quiet!

ELECTRIC LIGHT BULBS

REPAY FOR CLEANING

Electric light bulbs will repay one for giving them a good wash by furnishing a better light when washed and dustless. In washing these bulbs, do not put them to soak. Instead just wash each bulb in warm, soapy water and dry and polish it at once with a soft cloth.

Do not, however, to avoid any possibility of shock, replace them in the lighting fixture with wet hands. Also, in replacing the bulbs, do not screw them in too tightly. This is not necessary, once contact is made and the bulb lights, and often is injurious to both lamp socket and bulb.

INTERIOR DECORATION METHODS CHANGED IN RECENT YEARS

In recent years there has come about a tremendous change in the method of operation of the interior decorator. The first interior decorators were architects, as Perogies and the Adams brothers, Robert and James. Later the artist and fine cabinet maker collaborated in conceiving the entire scheme of decoration.

Of course, in those early times of quiet charm, when life was untroubled and the Graf Zeppelin and the talks were unheard of, the designer and decorator artist could work more slowly and methodically. Comparatively few commissions were executed by one man, and these were of larger stature to a depth of design, execution and assembling. Wood was carefully selected, stuffs for upholstery and draperies came from the Orient and Asia, from the hand looms of Italy, France and Spain. Rugs from Persia, China and Turkey were as yet unexplored by followers of Western philosophy.

Naturally, in an age unprepared for this, piece of workmanship, whether it be in the art design or in the art of craftsmanship, was paramount. Very little design was bad, and then seldom very bad. In other words, the decorating artist's life must have been one of supreme peace of mind, and he was free to quaff a mug, smoke a pipe, talk, think and work, unhurriedly and well.

MIDDLETON, N.S., Sept. 20.—A curious freak of Nature has occurred on the farm of J. A. Dodge, near here—two kittens born in Mr. Dodge's barn are each equipped with double forepaws. The extra paws grow out directly from the ankle joints and apparently do not impede the kittens in the slightest. On the same farm some of the cats have been going fishing of late. The brook which runs through the farm is almost entirely dried up and small brook trout have been left stranded in the small pools. The cats have made a practice of going to the brook and catching these fish to feed their kittens.

WET BASEMENTS ARE HARMFUL TO FLOORS

Cellars Can Be Made Watertight by Taking Precautions When Building

The annoyance caused by a basement or a cellar that is always damp or may become flooded with water during rainy seasons is well recognized. Many houses have damp or leaky basements which might have been made dry and watertight by a more careful study of the location, and suitable precautions when the house was built.

For ordinary well-drained soils, the most important requirements in building watertight masonry basement walls is to make certain that the joints are well filled with cement mortar and carefully pointed, and if the soil does not have good drainage, a line of drain tile placed entirely around the footing.

BACKFILL TRENCH
Down spouts from the roof can be connected with this line. The trench excavated for laying the tile should be backfilled with cinders or coarse gravel to within a foot or so of the surface, finished with material taken from the trench and tamped over. Joints between tile should be wrapped with pieces of burlap or sack to prevent any sediment filling the line, and it is best to cover the line with a layer of larger stones to a depth of about one foot before filling the trench.

If the soil is very moist or the ground water level is likely to rise above the footing, the usual treatment is to apply two or more coats of Portland cement mortar to the exterior surface of the walls. Another common treatment of waterproofing is to coat the exterior surface with hot tar, pitch or other preparation.

CONCRETE FLOORS

Concrete floors in basements should be at least four inches thick. A five or six-inch slab is desirable if unusual loads are to be supported, and where pressure of ground water is heavy, an even greater thickness is recommended. In the latter case, steel reinforcement is used to strengthen the floor slab. One-course construction is recommended for basement floors, the same mixture of concrete being used for the full thickness of the floor. The concrete slab commonly is placed directly on the earth.

On soil which is well-drained, however, a fill of cinders or gravel four to six inches thick and properly drained should be laid as a base for the concrete.

ANCIENT CAMPAIGN IS COMMEMORATED

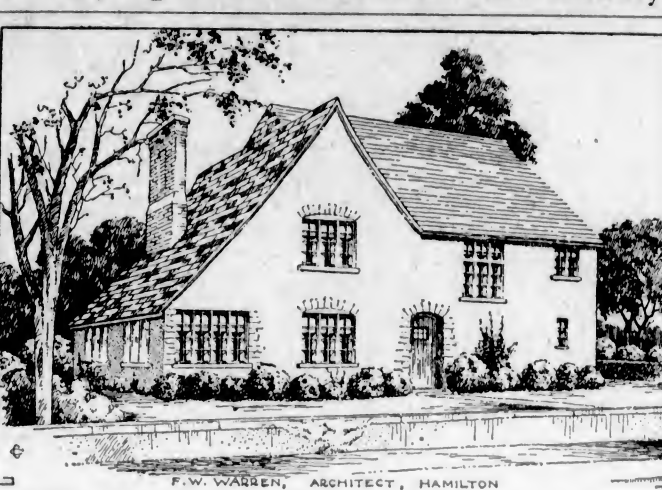

Tablet Unveiled at Annapolis Royal Memory of Rivals Against Port Royal

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, N.S., Sept. 20.—Anchored for handsome tablet was added recently to the collection of Fort Anne Park, when Major Howard Peel, Governor-General, of the General Society of Colonial Wars, unveiled and formally presented one, commemorating two successful expeditions against Port Royal from New England. The tablet is of bronze, bearing in relief the reproduction of the seal and badge of the society, the arms of Nova Scotia, and the seals of contributing state societies—Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. The inscription, also in relief, is as follows: "1654-1710. In commemoration of the capture of Port Royal by New England expeditions under Major Robert Sedgewick, 1654, and Colonel Francis Nicholson, 1710."

"In this second expedition Colonel Samuel Vetch was adjutant-general. There were thirty-one transports, four ships of sixty guns each, two of forty guns, one of thirty-six guns and two bomb galleys. The land forces were one regiment of marines, Colonel Robert Reading; two regiments from Massachusetts, under Colonel Sir Charles Hobby and Colonel William Taylor; and Colonel Shadrach Walton's New Hampshire Regiment. The Grenadiers were led by Captain Paul Mascarene. Erected A.D. 1920, by the General Society of Colonial Wars in the United States."

The unveiling took place at the Town Hall. Lieutenant-General Vetch was unable to attend, and sent regrets, and the Provincial Govern-

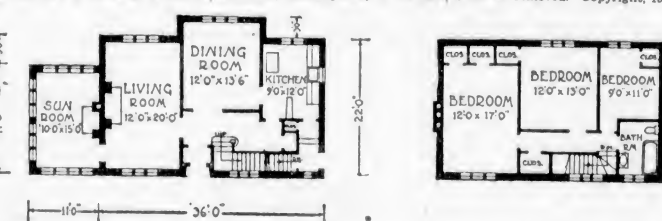

Sweeping Roof Lines Make for Beauty

F.W. WARREN, ARCHITECT, HAMILTON

LOW English roof lines, which introduce a feeling of gracefulness, make the exterior of this home one of unquestionable beauty. The sweeping lines add something which can only be described by the word "coziness." In order that the perfection of the design be completely carried out, it was necessary that the windows be characterized by tall lines. The excellent spacing of these windows are responsible for a feeling of largeness about the house, yet, in spite of this, the homelike atmosphere is very pronounced. Probably the stone trimming around the door and windows and stone-work informally scattered near the base of the house is one big reason for this.

A noteworthy feature of the exterior is the doorway. It will be seen that the door is set back a considerable distance from the front of the wall, resulting in a massive and substantial appearance. The hall is very impressive as well as rather unusual in layout. Although not overlarge, it adequately serves every room on the ground floor and houses the stairway, which offers many varieties of treatment. At one end of the hall, a coat closet is inconspicuously situated. Rooms, well proportioned and spacious, are comfortably lighted by many windows, divided into numerous lights, which are in vogue today. Conveniences of the kitchen will bring efficiency into the labors of the housewife. Set under a window, the sink enjoys a good position with a cheery outlook and good illumination. It is possible when using the ironing board to have natural light fall on it, aiding greatly in its use.

GARTER KING OF ARMS WILL BE NOMINATED

LONDON, Sept. 20.—As hereditary Earl Marshal of England it will fall to the youthful Duke of Norfolk, who celebrated his coming-of-age only last year, to recommend to the sovereign a successor to the late Sir Henry Parnham Burke in the august office of Garter King of Arms. This official is head of the College of Arms, and is responsible for the granting of armorial bearings in England and the Empire Overseas.

The late Garter King of Arms came of a family which had long been associated closely with matters genealogical. His grandfather was John Burke, who founded the well-known book of reference, "Burke's Peerage," which first appeared a little over a century ago as a "genealogical and heraldic dictionary." His father was Ulster King of Arms and Keeper of the State Papers in Ireland. Sir Henry Burke's immediate predecessor as Garter King of Arms was Sir Alfred Scott Gatty, member of a family whose literary efforts rendered them well-known in a much wider circle than that of the peerage and baronetage. Sir Alfred wrote the once popular song "True Blue Heart." One of his sisters, Mrs. Ewing, was author of the delightful story, "Jackanapes."

FEAR WELLS POISONED AND THINK DEMONS AT BACK OF EARTHQUAKES

At Eschschall and Nator, in Bengal, the drinking wells were disturbed for days and the water gave off strong fumes of sulphur.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 20.—Slight quivers have been an almost daily occurrence in the Himalayas ever since the earthquake of July 3, which was felt in Calcutta, rocked nearly the whole of Assam and did considerable damage in various parts of the vast mountain districts. At Eschschall and Nator, in Bengal, the drinking wells were disturbed for days and the water gave off strong fumes of sulphur. The people became panicky, fearing more severe shocks which might cut off their water supply altogether. It was a week before the authorities could reassure them that the water was perfectly all right for drinking purposes and that the wells had not been damaged in the least.

Of the various tribes living in the mountain fastnesses, some spots of which have reported more than 200 shocks, only the Nagas took upon the matter of earthquakes philosophically, having no fear of even the strongest quivers. Most of the other races ascribe the quakes to the anger of some demon, or some other spirit. But the Nagas are more charitable. They think quakes down to the mere sleepiness of some placid and benign old person. This is the way the Nagas see it.

There is a being who sits on his haunches with his hands folded over his knees. The top hand is the sky, and the bottom hand is the earth. Some times he dozes and releases his grip and his hands slip. Then there is an earthquake.

THE LIGHTING MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE

Better Appearance in Home Is Made by Attention to This Important Matter

Have you never noticed what wonderful effects can be obtained in a theatre by a variation of light? With the footlights turned on you get one effect, while with a light from the wings, you get a different effect. Other lights from the "flies" overhead may change the scene without moving a single piece of furniture.

The modern housewife can take a hint from this in striving for a better appearance in her home. A little attention to the lighting of the home will bring a greater return in appearance than many times the amount of money spent in furnishings, draperies and decorations.

Many women think that the furnishings of the living-room or dining-room is complete when new carpets, new stuffed furniture and new hangings have been produced. Yet the final touch is the lighting effects that will bring the room into proper lighting will completely transform the room, irrespective of the furniture.

Lighting fixtures ought to harmonize with the decorations and style of the furnishings. While women are giving a great deal of attention to this feature, they can avail themselves of the assistance of experts, thus assuring themselves of the latest and best in lighting, just as they do in decoration.

The counsel had just asked a question and the accused did not grasp the meaning. "Counsel means that you should tell the court what happened," said the judge. "Indeed, I won't," was the indignant reply; "what do you suppose I pleaded 'Not guilty' for?"

Farmer—"Do you know anything about farming?"
Applicant—"Yes, sir."
Farmer—"All right, then; from what side do you milk a cow?"
Applicant—"From the outside."
